MUNEACEN ONCE AGAIN.

There is but one Munkhosy, and M. Sedelperer is his purphet a persistent and loud-need prophet, and doubtless a wise one from bloom ponts of view. If he had not found it he own point of view. If he had not found it a remunerative task to vulgarize art and de-grade religion by exhibiting two great pictures of Christ amid theatrical surroundings, with street cars and gutters full of handbills bearstreet cars and gutters full of handbills bearing the name of the most sucred personage and the hallowed spots in history, and with lecture by reverond gentlemen whose would-to religious exhortations are as deplorably pomic as their would-be artistic commentaries—if, we say, the New York public had not layshly sustained him in these public had not be stated by the state of the enterprises and the place of the set in the stantion to pther fleids. He might, at his attention to pther fleids. He might, at his attention to mukkesy, and, failing another great religious picture. Shows us that death great religious picture. Shows us that death great religious picture. Shows us that death gene painted said and sung.

In his early dars, while he was still an artist and not a painter olding "special exhibition" anyses. Hunkesy was recognized as a man of unsual ability—vife a strong if somewhat of unsual ability—vife a strong if somewhat greated and the standard of the painter of the dramation and a very vectous and individual infrastion, and a servery hone the afterworld will care about the blue has a most proposed to be paint a picture to his a very home the afterworld will care about a having been both sincere and original. But with the passing years his sins were corrupted to blace himself. but a paint a picture to his having been both sincere and original. But with the passing years his sins were corrupted to his hear naturally followed deterioration of his resultive power. He attempted subjects which were too great fortim, and he painted them leas conscientious and therefore less successfully than those which corresponded to his neture for the painted ashowing the run of what high bave been a remarkible althou getures are not even iteresting—they are simply painful, as showing the ruin of what might have been a remarkble although never a very attractive talent.

The new "Mozart" is better in some ways than the two larger picture of Christ—notably in composition. The grop is very well disposed, and interest is well-oncentrated upon the principal figure, although, it must be contained, parily by the aid of the rather cheap device of making the fillow upon which Mozart's head reposes todbrightly white to be in keeping with the rest of the color scheme. In this color cheme also and in its execution the picture seems better than its huge predecessors, though, of course, it is impossible really is jugge of it as it now hance in a claring artificial light, and at a considerable distance from the pearast spectator. But in those essentials which make the truest value of any picture which purports to show us a scene like this then is nothing to praise. With all its shortcomings the "Milton" at the Lenox Gallers is not only a light better work, ut a work of a cutte different order. It may like it or not as a picture and may thinlit true or not as a conception of the given soee; but we cannot full to recognize that it is a conception—that the artist took an interes in his subject, had a clear idea of what he whiled to express, and haw how to express it. In the Mozart, on the other hand, there is no conception, dramatically or emotionary, so called. Not a single figure has any human interest or individuality or expressing aything except in this figure and in that of Mizart himself, and in the latter case the attapt was so clumsily made that we do not eachly see at what it aimed. There is no individual in the face of the special mood into when the artist believed that Mozart had been threw by the music of his requiem, thus sung for him in his dying hour and the gesture of the content see at what it aimed. There is no individual in the face of the special mood into whe the artist believed that Mozart had been threw by the music of

SHE WOULD NOT MARRY IN 1887.

Superstition Stronger with Miss Fischer than Care for Hor Good Name A Bellevue Hospital ambulance was called at 1 o'clock yesterday morning to 904 First Fischer dying there. Her baby, born last Sunday, was alive and hearty. Bertha Schroeder, the midwife who keeps the dingy place and has several other patients there, wanted to send Miss Fischer to Bellevue, but the doctor would not move her and notified the police. She was dead when they got there. The arrest of the midwife and of the girl's mother. Veronica Fischer of 457 West Forty-fourth street, fol lowed, and then Emil Weber of 607 West 180th street, father of the child, was hunted up and a curious story came out. Mrs. Fischer told the Coroner that a year and a half ago her daughter became engaged to marry Weber, who is a musician. Weber and Elizabeth became unduly intimate. The wedding day was finally set for Oct. 15, but a month before this time arrived an older brother of Elizabeth got married. Then some women told Elizabeth that it would be very unlucky it

Elizabeth got married. Then some women told Elizabeth that it would be very unlucky if she and her brother both married in the same year. The result was that despite the urgent solicitations of her lover and her mother, Elizabeth eliused to be married in 1887, and set her wedding day for Feb. 22 which would be a month after her child would be born.

Elizabeth also, according to her mother, insisted on going out of her house at the time of her confinement, and declared that she wanted to go to Mrs. Schroeder's, whose advertisement she had seen in the Stants-Zeitung. In this Mrs. Fisher reluctantly acquiesced, and, with her daughter, she called on Mrs. Schroeder and made arrangements for Elizabeth to stay at Mrs. Schroeder's house.

Elizabeth went to Mrs. Schroeder's on Dec. 20, agreeing to say Mrs. Schroeder's house.

Elizabeth went to Mrs. Schroeder's on Dec. 20, agreeing to say Mrs. Schroeder's house, on Sunday last, and Elizabeth was apparently getting well, according to the woman. She grew suddenly worse on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Schroeder called in Dr. D. F. King, and he prescribed. He attended Elizabeth several times on Friday. The girl died at 1% o'clock Saturday morning. She was 21 years old.

Deput Coroner Scholer made a post-mortem, and said that he believed that death was due to Ignorant treatment by the midwife.

"Then you mean to say," said Coroner Eldman." that the girl would not have died if a skilled physician had had charge o' the case?" O'h!" said Dr. Scholer. "cases like it occur under the treatment of the best physicians." All the prisoners were discharged. A formal inquest will be held.

A Becree of Divorce Annuited.

CANAJOHARIE, Jan. 14 .- Among the decisions handed down by Justice Macomber of the Supreme Court this morning was one annulling the divorce granted plaintiff in the case of Allen B. Becker of Hemiock Lake against his wife. Adelia J. Becker. This will be very embarrassing to Mr. Becker, for since he decree of divorce was granted he has transferred his affections to a winsome Buffalo lady, whom he affections to a winsome Buffalo lady, whom he lately married. In her patition to the court, Mrs. Becker alleged that the divorce was procuredishrough fraudulent proceedings and false evidence, and that her first knowledge of the decree was received when she learned that her husband was arranging to join his fortunes with those of the Buffalo lady. She then instituted an investigation, and on finding that she had been the victim of a conspiracy she began an action to recover her rights and defend her honor. The court was evidently satisfied that her allegations were true. She is again the lawful wife of Allen B. Becker, and Mr. Becker's shrius is that of a husband and a quasi husband. The position of the second Mrs. Becker is particularly unfortunate. Mr. Becker is a prominent citizen of Hemlock Lake and has occupied public positions of trust.
